

South Perry.

Mr. Tecumseh Floyd, of Laurelville, was seen on our streets last Wednesday. He was invited to make a speech to the soldiers but gracefully declined saying he was not prepared, something strange, Mr. Floyd was never known to be out of something to say in the last fifty years.

Ricketts will deliver the memorial address to the Oddfellows and their friends. Music will be furnished by the Adelpheia Brass Band. Every Body invited.

Carbonhill.

How did you decorate? Did you do it with a patriotic spirit, solemnity that was fit for the occasion, or did you put flowers on the graves of the dead with one hand and thorns in the paths of the living with the other?

I wish to call attention to the fact that in our items of last week several mistakes occurred either caused by our poor scribbling or on the part of the printer.

Miss Clara Chute, of this place, whose illness we mentioned some time ago, died in Straitsville, May 27, the funeral was held at this place, May 29, under the direction of Undertaker Essex and Elder C. M. Arthur, of Straitsville. Those from a distance who attended were Mr. and Mrs. Burl Carpenter, of Lancaster, and Mr. J. C. Huls, of Rockbridge. While Clara was but 17 years of age her death verifies the old adage "In the midst of life we are in death," or "It is but a step from the cradle to the grave." It comes as a warning to the young people that they have no lease on life beyond the present. We are made to understand that death belongs to the young and gay as well as the old and infirm; for the poet has so beautifully yet solemnly said:

O ye young, ye gay, ye proud,
You must die and wear the shroud;
Time will rob you of your bloom,
And death will drag you to the tomb.

Bowen, after winning the first two of the series.

The scores of the five were, respectively, 11 to 9, 7 to 5, 3 to 6, 5 to 7, and 3 to 6. Farber is considered an unusually fast player, having taken one set from R. D. Little, at the Tri-State Tournament held in Cincinnati last summer. Little is now among American champions playing in England. Bowen demonstrated that he is in the front rank of amateur tennis players of the state. His game was the finest ever seen around here.

"A thousand dollar license," said the man behind the bar, As he lightly knocked the ashes from his No. 1 cigar; "Well, I guess that I can stand it if the other fellow can, But I'll have to shape my business on the thousand dollar plan. And if the law insists on the thousand dollar raid, I will have to shift the burden to the shoulders of my trade—Or rather to their stomachs, if their stomachs can sustain, And their kidneys stand the pressure of a thousand dollar strain And I'll drown them and I'll drench them and do my level best, Till the dear old oaken bucket sighs for solitude and rest; And I'll mix them and I'll fix them with the cheapest vilest stuff Till the kidneys holler 'murder' and the liver shouts 'enough,' And I'll trim them to a finish and I'll trim them to a stand, Till an honest glass of whiskey is a stranger in the land And the 'shakes' and 'snakes' and 'jimjams' and delirium tremens, 'too Aint a marker or a circumstance to either one of you. And I'll pay that thousand dollars and respect the license clan, Though for every dollar that I pay I'll have to kill a man."

Wealthy Men Are Agencies For Good

By United States Senator WILLIAM A. CLARK of Montana

THE men of great wealth—I speak of course of those whose fortunes are ACTIVE AND PRODUCTIVE and not of the idle rich—are agencies for good. They uphold, create and develop. They open up new territories, bring new industries into being, build railroads and ships and factories and give EMPLOYMENT AND OPPORTUNITIES to thousands.

The proposition to discriminate against them, therefore, is not altogether in accordance with my view of justice. In one way it would be putting a penalty on initiative—large initiative, which only those possessed of great wealth can put forth—and tend to smother it. Many fortunes which are now active and productive would become STAGNANT. But aside from that I am opposed to direct taxation as a matter of principle and general public policy. Indirect taxation falls upon the whole, while direct taxation falls upon a very small class, a condition likely to engender a CONFLICT OF CLASS INTERESTS.

The small class of direct taxpayers should not be given cause to feel that they are being unduly burdened for the benefit of the overwhelming numbers of those who are indirectly taxed. Property is under great obligations to the state, and the charges which its preservation entail bear a larger proportion in the cost of administration than the mere maintenance of civil government. It is right, therefore, that property should make a proportionate contribution for state purposes, but it is not right that in a democratic government such as ours the many should to any extent be permitted to SHIFT THEIR JUST BURDENS on the shoulders of the few.

The accumulation of wealth in the hands of a small number might constitute an element of danger to the nation if this favored minority were exclusively composed of reckless and unprincipled men, but fortunately this is not the case. GREAT WEALTH BRINGS GREAT RESPONSIBILITY and far from dulling the moral sense makes new and greater demands upon it.

The impoverishing of the national blood by the admixture of foreign elements of a DISEASED AND VICIOUS character is a much greater peril to the nation. Temperamentally I am an optimist. No man has a greater faith in the future of this country, particularly of the west, than I have.

BUT THE CONSTANTLY INCREASING INFUX OF UNDESIRABLE CHARACTERS FROM ABROAD, UNLESS IT BE CHECKED FIRMLY AND AT ONCE, CANNOT HELP BUT CAUSE DETERIORATION OF THE NATIONAL CHARACTERISTICS.

May Day.

The Roman youths used to go into the fields and spend the calends of May in dancing and singing in honor of Flora, goddess of fruits and flowers. The early English consecrated May day to Robin Hood and the Maid Marian, because the favorite outlaw died on that day.

Bothersome Manners.

The little maiden stirred her cup. "I'm sorry I was well brought up. If I had not been taught to be polite when I was out to tea, I'd ask you if you'd let me take Another piece of raisin cake."
